

November 22, 2019 | National Mining & Related Industries Day

November the 22nd signifies National Mining and Related Industries Day 2019, an important annual day that will be celebrated this year at Kings Park in Perth, Western Australia.

A time to reflect, consider, appreciate & champion the mining community and the myriad of benefits to all Australians that result.

Co-sponsored by Roy Hill, Rio Tinto and BHP, this year, as prior years' events, will be truly remarkable.

Aside from enjoying world-class entertainment throughout, this year's 3,000 strong audiences will have the opportunity to listen to National Mining and Related Industries Day Patrons Tad Watroba, Hancock Prospecting's Executive Director and the pinnacle of the mining industry, Gina Rinehart, Hancock Prospecting's Executive Chairman.

Special guests at the event include the Federal Resources Minister, the Hon Senator Matthew Canavan as well as leaders from BHP, Rio Tinto and Roy Hill whom will each speak in contribution and in celebration of our industry. Each of which acknowledging just how significant mining and its related industries are to investment, job creation and ongoing significantly enhanced Australian living standards.

This annual celebration presents a brilliant opportunity for us all to show genuine appreciation for Australia's mining and related industries – as they remain ultimately, one of our country's most significant and necessary sectors, essential to the ongoing quality of life experienced by every Australian.
